Since its inception, Bangor has benefitted from the support of donors at all levels. The Worshipful Company of Drapers, which funded the building of the Library, continues to give in the present day. Quarrymen and agricultural workers, giving by public subscription from their weekly wages, played a crucial role in the establishment of the original University College. It’s not only major gifts that are important; the collective impact of many donations is transformational.

Donors have commemorated many important occasions in our shared history; for example, the Memorial Appeal following the First World War made possible the building of the North Wales Heroes’ Memorial Arch and the science buildings on Deiniol Road. Latterly, the Centenary Campaign of the 1980s played a key role in revitalising Bangor’s fundraising activities.

Today, many alumni, staff members and friends of the University make regular gifts to a range of projects and initiatives. I am delighted to say that this Roll of Donors lists nearly 900 individuals and organisations that have supported us during the past three academic years.

Giving is more important to Bangor today than it has ever been. Our funding body, the Higher Education Funding Council for Wales, HEFCW, has announced a three year matched funding scheme through which we will receive £1 for every £2 given to Bangor, beginning with gifts received during the last academic year (2008/09). This is an important acknowledgement of the role that charitable giving plays in sustaining universities in Wales.

Looking to the future, philanthropic giving will continue to be crucial to Bangor’s ongoing success. Funding studentships remains an important priority; we are expanding our Anniversary Research Scholarships Programme to support a broad range of talented postgraduate students, so that we can secure our position as a distinguished research-led university.

We also have ambitious plans to construct new facilities, including the £40 million Arts and Innovation Centre, to meet the needs of today’s scholars and modernise both the campus and Bangor’s cityscape. This project has been named Pontio (Welsh: to bridge) as the new Centre will span many traditional boundaries: between science and the arts, business and academia, and the University and the community, to name just a few. Community has always been at the heart of Bangor’s enterprise, and we remain committed to applying our collective talents to benefit the world at large.

As many of you know, I will be retiring from the post of Vice-Chancellor by October 2010. I am deeply appreciative of the support that individuals and organisations have expressed for the University — and me personally — during my time here, and truly value your continued relationship with us.

Each donor listed in this report has demonstrated a commitment to Bangor University and the wider community which we serve. Many of you support Bangor because of what it has given to you, as former students, staff members and members of the community. Thank you for everything that you have given to Bangor University.

YOUR GIFTS ARE TRANSFORMATIONAL.
Promises of £1,000 each from seven of the group’s leaders launched the campaign, and by October 1884 the sum of £37,000 had been obtained from almost 8,000 subscribers. The local Penrhyn and Dinorwic quarrymen alone subscribed over £1,250.

The University has relied on the support of generous individuals and the public at large since being founded in 1884 in an old coaching inn. In 1902 a general canvass of North Wales and the Welsh communities in England was made for contributions towards a ‘Permanent Buildings Fund’, and in 10 years a sum of almost £100,000 had been collected. Subscribers included alumni, past and present staff and local individuals; Pentraeth on Anglesey was one of several villages in which every family made its contribution. Many benefactors from across Wales, Scotland and England also gave major donations and 100 years later some of these donors continue to support the University.

The funding for the Memorial Arch, erected in 1923, came from the ‘North Wales Heroes Memorial Fund’. In 2007 funds for the restoration of the Memorial Arch were raised once again through the generosity of alumni, charitable trusts and friends of the University.

In the 50 years from its inauguration, over £430,000 was donated to the University, and in 1934 the University published a Roll of Donors to thank all those who had given their time and money to “promote the University’s rise from small beginnings”. This Roll of Donors is a way of thanking you for pledging your support to the University more recently.
MAKE YOUR GIFT GO FURTHER.

The Higher Education Funding Council for Wales (HEFCW) has recently introduced a £10 million, three year scheme to encourage philanthropic giving to universities.

Through 2011, Bangor will receive an extra £1 from HEFCW for every £2 given by charitable donors; all your generous donations will help us to make the most of the scheme.

If you are a UK taxpayer, your gift and your Gift Aid (25% of the value of your gift) will be matched under the scheme. This means that if you make a gift of £100 the University will receive £190.50 – nearly doubling the amount of your gift! This scheme applies to both UK and overseas donors. Normally, matched funding received under this scheme will be applied for the same purpose as the original donation.

This matched funding will be a marvellous boost for Bangor and for all of you who place importance on the value of higher education.

“Securing philanthropic support for Bangor’s students is becoming increasingly important. Emerging economies across the globe are investing more in education and training, giving generous scholarships to those entering higher education. If we are to retain the UK’s brightest students and attract the best students from across the world, we too must offer additional financial support for them to study, and provide facilities which will enhance their learning experience.”

Professor Dermot Cahill, Head of Bangor Law School.
Since its inception, Bangor University has been privileged to benefit from the philanthropy of generous individuals and organisations. To this day, philanthropic support continues to play an integral part in ensuring that Bangor University’s students benefit from an outstanding education, supported by excellent teaching, facilities and services.

Bangor University, home to over 12,000 students and nearly 2,000 members of staff, is renowned in the UK and internationally for both pre-eminent teaching and research across a spectrum of academic disciplines. The University’s success today is a testament to the foresight and ambition of the founding supporters, and also to all those who have since given their time and money to ensure that Bangor has the necessary resources to provide teaching and learning of the highest quality.

Gifts at all levels have made a real difference to Bangor University, and they will continue to do so. Over the past ten years, almost £4 million has been donated by generous donors. The support of philanthropic individuals and companies has meant that talented young people from all backgrounds, regardless of geography or life circumstance, have had access to financial help through the University’s scholarships, bursaries and hardship grants, enabling them to benefit from a world-class education. Bangor’s students have benefitted from excellent facilities and services and the University has supported a wide range of Welsh language and cultural activities; funding has been provided for Welsh Medium Fellows and a bust of Professor Bedwyr Lewis Jones, professor of Welsh Language and Literature at Bangor from 1974 to 1992 and author of ‘The Welsh Arthur’, has recently been completed through the generosity of donors.
Bangor University has benefited from the support of a number of trusts and foundations for many years including the Kirby Laing Foundation, which in 2000 donated a substantial gift for the provision of a dry laboratory on the Prince Madog, the School of Ocean Science’s research vessel.

The School of Ocean Sciences has also been able to establish a ‘Sir Kirby Laing Visiting Fellowship’ through a generous donation made by the Kirby Laing Foundation in 1993. Annual interest accrued from the fund has allowed the University to attract eminent international marine scientists to visit Bangor and give lectures to students and staff and to develop research collaborations.

Recent ‘Sir Kirby Laing’ fellows have included Professors from as far afield as the USA, South Africa and Australia, who have presented research and teaching seminars and provided assistance for PhD student research.

According to Professor Chris Richardson of the School of Ocean Sciences, the donation from the Kirby Laing Foundation has been invaluable:

“The Kirby Laing Fellowship Fund is a really useful resource which has enabled School of Ocean Sciences staff to forge links with scientists in other areas of the world, ensuring that we remain a leading international research institution. The visiting fellows have become involved in collaborative research projects and a number of scientific articles have been published as a direct result of the Sir Kirby Laing Visiting Fellowships.”

Dr Mike Roberts from the School of Ocean Sciences has been granted funding from the Gaynor Cemlyn-Jones Trust to develop and deliver an educational outreach resource designed to promote interest in aspects of Earth Science to primary school students. Dr Roberts says:

“Over 2000 children have already taken part in the first interactive element of the project, which focussed on dinosaurs and the history of Earth, and now ‘Life on the Seashore’ is being taken into local classrooms. The support I have received really is benefiting the whole community.”
Dewi Llyr Jones, a lecturer at Bangor’s Law School, was appointed as Welsh Medium Teaching Fellow in 2004. Dewi’s position was part funded by the Worshipful Company of Drapers, and he feels that without the support of the Draper’s Company and other generous donors, the Law School wouldn’t have been able to grow as it has done.

Dewi says:

"With the financial assistance we received from various philanthropic donors, we’ve been able to open up the subject to more people, especially as we now have Welsh-medium provision in all the core modules."

The founding of the School of Law in 2004 was made possible by a range of donors, many of whom, like the Drapers’ Company, continue to support the school today.

Emma Roberts, one of the first students to be awarded a degree in Law (LLB) at Bangor University in 2007, is now working towards a PhD concentrating on Personal Injury Law from a European perspective.

Emma realised that more research should be done in this area after writing her undergraduate thesis on the subject, and is now certain that her study will be of great academic interest in the field of Law. Emma applied for a Drapers scholarship, which is supported through the Thomas Howell’s Education Fund for North Wales, once she’d been accepted as a PhD student. She believes the benefits of the scholarship go beyond the financial support she’s received.

"Securing financial assistance from the Drapers’ Company has been an immense accolade. I was keen to pursue my studies further, but couldn’t have done so without the assistance of the Drapers. I now receive financial support for my fees and living expenses, but more than that, I’ve benefited from being a part of the Drapers’ network. I was recently invited to a dinner in London, where I had the opportunity to meet with other scholarship students and network with academics; I’ve really been made to feel a part of the Drapers’ community."

Thank you to Mr Bryan Jones, who recently kindly donated books to the Business School. Mr Jones, a Bangor alumnus who graduated with a BA in Economics in 1950, says that he gave the books as a way of thanking the University because he had such an enjoyable time whilst studying here.
Anahita Baregheh was the successful applicant of the first ever BIC Innovation sponsored PhD scholarship here at Bangor University.

Now in the final year of her PhD, Anahita has nothing but positive things to say about her time at the University and the support she has received from the locally based firm:

“...This scholarship has provided me with an opportunity to do research into an area that I’m passionate about as well as gain experience in business. I’d really like to follow a career in academia, so have appreciated being able to lead tutorials, but am also grateful that I’ve had the chance to be part of the team at BIC. The funding I’ve received has meant that I’m able to dedicate myself to my PhD, but the University’s collaboration with BIC has also ensured that I can further my knowledge of business world. I’ve received excellent advice and guidance from the team at BIC as well as my supervisors in the Business School.”

Anahita believes that all involved in the scholarship have benefited:

“...My PhD research is on innovation management. BIC and Bangor University have certainly been innovative; through their investment in me, I’ve been able to introduce new ideas to the company, and the company’s involvement in my work has added a different dimension to my research, ultimately improving the quality of the findings coming out of my PhD.”

Huw Watkins, Development Director at BIC Innovation added:

“...As a business, we have been providing innovation support to the north Wales region for many years. Anahita’s research has enabled us to improve our understanding of the issues facing SMEs when they embrace innovation. Furthermore, we have benefited from her input and in particular her adept research skills, which have been invaluable on active commercial contracts.”

We give to Bangor University to show our appreciation for the wonderful educational opportunities given to so many Irish students.

PPM Technology, which was set up by Dr Tom Jones, part funded Dr Robyn Wheldon-Williams’ research at Bangor from 1998 to 2001. Since being awarded a PhD for his work on Electrochemical Fuel Cell Sensors, Dr Wheldon-Williams has also become passionate about motivating children to get involved in science.

Robyn now teaches Science at Ysgol Brynhafyd in Ruthin and has joined the University on a secondment to promote chemistry to school children. He has developed a Chemistry Show that has now been presented to over 25,000 children, and has presented experiments on S4C’s Science show for children, which was nominated for a BAFTA Wales award.

Dr Robyn Wheldon-Williams credits much of his success to the support he and his PhD supervisor, former Bangor Professor Maher Kalaji, received from Dr Tom Jones.

I was fortunate that Dr Tom Jones recognises the importance of chemistry, and the need to advance the research programme at Bangor University. With the knowledge I now have, I’m able to help others gain a better understanding of the world of science, and will hopefully help other students to fulfil their potential.

Through supporting Robyn with his studies, Dr Tom Jones has indirectly managed to inspire many others to take an interest in further education and follow a career in science; Robyn’s tireless enthusiasm for public engagement has directly contributed to Bangor’s recruiting increasing numbers of students to the study of chemistry at degree level. Dr Tom Jones is delighted at Robyn’s achievements:

Robyn has fulfilled our ambitions and gone beyond. It is marvellous and very gratifying for me to see that all this has contributed to greater enthusiasm for chemistry at Bangor.
Bangor University and the Dean and Chapter of Bangor Cathedral have been working together to give people access to one of Wales’ most important treasures, the Bangor Pontifical – a medieval book of major historical, musical and liturgical significance. Dr Sue Niebrzydowski, Research Lecturer in Medieval Literature, says that the project’s success lies with the support of generous individuals, charitable organisations from the Cathedral and the Church in Wales and national and international funding bodies.

We have completed the digital photography of the Pontifical with the funding we’ve already received, and we’re now setting up a dedicated Pontifical website. The Pontifical is part of Welsh culture, and it’s important that we can make the content of the book available to everyone; the website will enable users to zoom in on the Pontifical’s intricate decoration and musical notation, and to hear some of the chants performed.

To learn more about the Pontifical, please visit the project website, which can be found via the Archives page on the Bangor University website: www.bangor.ac.uk

Guto Puw is one of the most promising Welsh composers of his generation. Guto was appointed as the first resident composer with the BBC National Orchestra of Wales and his Concerto for Oboe won the BBC Radio 3 ‘Listeners Award’ category at the 2007 British Composer Awards.

Music has long been the focus of Guto’s life, but were it not for the postgraduate scholarship he was awarded in 1997 at Bangor University, Guto wouldn’t have been able to fulfil his dream of becoming a composer.

Guto says:

Being awarded the Parry Williams Postgraduate Scholarship meant that I was able to concentrate on my research instead of worrying about financial insecurity. To this day I’m very grateful to the School of Music for giving me the opportunity to do my PhD in Musical Composition.
Dr Andy Smith received funding from the Drapers’ Company and the Sir William Roberts bequest for his PhD on the effects of climate change (elevated carbon dioxide) on forest ecosystems. Since completing his PhD, Dr Smith has gone on to become a Research Officer at Bangor University, investigating climate change (drought and warming) on upland ecosystems.

Dr Smith says that he will definitely contribute towards scholarship funds in the future to enable other individuals to have the same opportunities that he has benefited from, and explains why scholarships are so important:

"Financial support enables people from a diverse range of backgrounds to have the opportunity to study when they otherwise would find it very difficult. It also enables alternative and innovative research ideas to come to fruition that otherwise may never be funded."

CONTRIBUTE TO THE DEVELOPMENT OF A SUSTAINABLE WORLD.

The donation from The George Thomas Educational Trust has been of great help, easing the burden of the full international fees. I look forward to excelling in my studies throughout the year, and hope I can be of use to the world with my qualifications.

Mikael Norton, 3rd year Environmental Sciences student from Zimbabwe.
SHAPE THE FUTURE OF BANGOR UNIVERSITY.

Roll of Donors 2006 – 2009

Listed below are the names of all those who have made a contribution to Bangor University between 1st August 2006 and 31st July 2009. The next Roll of Donors, to be published in late 2010, will list gifts received between 1 August 2009 and 31st July 2010, which is the University’s 2009/10 fiscal year.

Whilst every effort has been made to ensure that all gift details are correct, we would appreciate it if you could inform the Development Office of any errors or omissions.

Roll of Donors 2006 – 2009
Bangor University would like to acknowledge the generosity of donors to the following funds, which continue to benefit a wide range of student awards, outreach activities and public events. Following the Development Trust's closure on 1 March 2010, these endowed funds transferred to the University.

A full list of Bangor University donors will be available at www.bangor.ac.uk/giving from July 2010.
ENHANCE THE STUDENT EXPERIENCE.

Donations given through the Annual Fund help Bangor University achieve its aim of providing its students with the best educational experience available, supported by outstanding facilities and services.

Annual Fund gifts are for current use, and, therefore, complement major gifts made to the University’s endowed funds, which are held in perpetuity.

Donors can designate their gifts within four broad categories:

• Greatest Needs: these gifts are allocated to the University’s most pressing priorities.

• Student Support: this funds a wide range of student awards, including scholarships, bursaries and hardship grants, for both undergraduate and postgraduate students.

• Campus Improvement: helps preserve the University’s architectural legacy and ensuring that students study and live in buildings which are conducive to learning of the highest quality.

• Welsh Medium Provision Support: gifts to this fund support a wide range of Welsh language and cultural activities.

Wherever an Annual Fund gift is directed, it supports Bangor University’s important work.

By securing Annual Fund gifts from a growing number of individuals, Bangor University is becoming better positioned to secure further support from charitable trusts and other organisations.

For more information about the Annual Fund, please contact:
Emma Marshall, Annual Giving Officer, +44 (0) 1248 382594, e.marshall@bangor.ac.uk

“Taking part in the Annual Fund campaign built my confidence as I learnt new skills that may be useful for the future. Actually hearing some of the things people did at Bangor and what they are doing with their lives now was truly amazing and I won’t forget that. Obtaining gifts for student support was great; I can be happy knowing that a student can come to Bangor with financial support because of the work we did.”

Katy Seaton, Student Caller for the 2010 Spring Annual Fund Telethon.

“What a well organised funding campaign you’re running ...the student who called me was clear about the purpose of the call but also wanted to discuss my time at the University and whether I enjoyed it... I have been convinced that in future I will look to do whatever I can to support Bangor University.”

David Brooke, Managing Director, Mathieson & Brooke Tailors Ltd [1996, Psychology].
Legacy gifts ensure our continuing excellence, helping us to plan for the future with confidence. Bequests support many areas of our work, including scholarship and bursary awards, academic posts and programmes, and library resources. They also help to preserve and enhance our endowment and our architectural heritage.

Over the last 3 years alumni and members of staff have demonstrated their lasting commitment to the future success of Bangor University by remembering us in their wills. Mrs Gwladys [Gail] Rees, a former staff member at Bangor Normal College left £10,000 in memory of her husband, Mr Edward Rees, former Principal of the Normal College and Vice-President of the University. Miss Nést Morris Jones has given a bequest of over £250,000 to support programmes in the study of the Welsh Language and education through the medium of Welsh. And Sir Kyffin Williams RA, a friend of the University, left a substantial gift including important works of art, books and furniture.

Please inform us if you wish to include Bangor University in your will. You will be invited to join the 1884 Circle, a group for future legacy donors. This is our way of thanking those generous individuals who remember Bangor in their wills. Members of the Circle will be invited to occasional donor events, amongst other benefits.

For more information on how you can leave a legacy to Bangor University, please contact: Kirsty Thomson, +44 (0) 1248 382671, k.l.thomson@bangor.ac.uk

It takes a noble person to plant a tree that will one day provide shade for those whom he may never meet. — Anon

Isaac Eyton Roberts, a Bangor alumnus (1936, Physics), recently left a generous bequest of over 20 works of art to the University. These include paintings by local artists, including ’Tal-y-Bont’, a water colour by Claude Muncaster (1903–1974) and ‘Pont y Garr’ by David Law (1831–1901).

The paintings are now proudly displayed in the recently refurbished postgraduate study rooms in the Main Arts building. Mr Roberts also left a £15,000 bursary in memory of his parents, Mr John David Roberts and Mrs Phoebe Roberts, to support students in the School of Theology and Religious Studies.

ENSURE BANGOR UNIVERSITY’S FUTURE EXCELLENCE IN AN EVER-CHANGING WORLD.
Over the past 10 years over 1250 donations have been pledged to Bangor University, and many of those listed in this Roll of Donors have been supporting Bangor for over 10 years. Over the past 3 years, the philanthropic donors listed here have given over £1.2 million to Bangor University. The average donation has been worth £3,000, and a significant number of donors give over £250 a year to the University. Our donors provide essential financial support, and their commitment allows us to plan for the future with a greater degree of certainty.

We want to recognise people and organisations that support the University philanthropically by inviting our donors to join gift giving societies. This autumn we’ll be contacting you about the benefits associated with being a member of these giving groups, including special communications about Bangor’s programmes and scholarships and invitations to events.

BECOME PART OF THE BANGOR COMMUNITY.

RAISE AWARENESS OF PHILANTHROPIC SUPPORT FOR HIGHER EDUCATION.

Bangor University will be joining other UK higher-education institutions this September in celebrating University Donor Pin Week, a national initiative aimed at raising awareness of philanthropic support for higher-education.

Donor pins will be sent to members of the gift giving societies in autumn.

We hope that you’ll make a special effort to wear your pin in September to highlight your generosity and share your pride in Bangor University!

Taking a second degree as a mature student at Bangor was fundamental to enabling me to change career direction. This is why I feel so strongly that I must do whatever I reasonably can to support Bangor.

— Peter Carpenter, Bangor Alumnus (1997, MA Forestry).
In his inaugural speech the first President of the University, the Earl of Powis, spoke of his hope that the University would ‘open the treasury of knowledge to many succeeding generations’. Bangor University now offers 500 different degree programmes and already has a community of over 70,000 alumni in over 100 countries, all of whom have benefitted from the facilities provided through philanthropic support.

In these times of increasing pressure on student finances, your support for Bangor’s students ensures that they can not only pursue their studies, but also thrive during their time here. Through your contributions, we are ensuring that the treasury of knowledge here at Bangor is passed on to the students of the future.

Since its inception, those associated with Bangor University have been successful in ensuring that the local community, and the wider world, benefits from what it has to offer. Rhodri Morgan, Wales’ former First Minister, recently acknowledged that ‘Bangor’s record in developing the regional economy is superb’. As we enter a new decade, the challenge now is to make sure we can continue to provide teaching and learning of the highest quality and contribute to a sustainable Wales and a sustainable world. With your continued support we can rise to the challenge and develop Bangor University for many succeeding generations.

THANK YOU FROM EVERYONE AT BANGOR UNIVERSITY.
Jonathan Hickling, Bangor Alumnus (1980, Ecology) and recent donor.

My daughter Rebecca was awarded £500 through Bangor University’s Student Hardship Fund... I always wanted to repay the University for its kindness and ensure that funds were available for other students suffering financial hardship.
